

The problem with tech today is that the individuals that are shaping these products and services all share a similarly white and male perspective on the world, and very evidently struggle to empathize with the experiences of the people for whom they are creating products.

Am
Rec

People want easy solutions to these tough problems, where they can give money and feel like they are “eliminating poverty”, rather than giving money to help a handful of families in a place they’ve never heard of.

WORLD BANK

unicef

